

Cameron Stake Bio

Cameron Stake was born and raised in Maitland, Florida, a suburb of Orlando. Despite not growing up with a farming background, Cameron found a passion for the agricultural industry while in high school. He is currently a Senior and is studying Food and Resource Economics at the University of Florida. After college, Cameron aims to pursue a career in agribusiness.

Recognizing the opportunities, education and resources that his college has blessed him with, Cameron remains very involved on campus. He has served as President of the Alpha Gamma Rho fraternity, officer of both Collegiate Farm Bureau and the Agricultural and Life Sciences College Council. Cameron has also spent his time volunteering for Inclusive Fitness and Unified Sports, serving as an Ambassador for his college, and was a team member of the National Agri-Marketing Association Team.

To gain industry experience, Cameron pursued two internships. In the summer of 2019, he interned for Farm Credit of Florida. While working in their Alachua office, Cameron was able to learn more about finance and lending within agriculture. During the summer of 2018, he interned for Walther Farms, one of the largest producers of chipping potatoes for the Frito-Lay Company. Cameron gained a wealth of knowledge from both internships and expanded his network.

Whether working on a farm or selling agricultural products, Cameron knows that his education will set him on the path to career success. His main goal is to be a part of the generation that helps feed 9 billion people by 2050.
